

<http://holiday.snrk.de/>

<http://www.snrk.de/HolidaySnark.pdf>

click to load file via <http://www.snrk.de/HolidaySnark.cgi>

Version history:

- 2009-12-31: New presentation in HTML: In <http://holiday.snrk.de/> you now find 9 comparisons of illustrations by Henry Holiday to works of other artists. The site is like a photo album: You simply scroll through the pages just using the "next" or "previous" button. And if you want to keep a safe distance to the Boojum (see the two images below), then please do not click on the pictures. However, if your curiosity and phantasy had neither softly nor suddenly vanished away yet, you may prefer not to listen to my warning and find out, that "The Hunting of the Snark" still is a quite underestimated work of art.
<http://holiday.snrk.de/BeCurious.htm> !
- Goetz Kluge * <http://holiday.snrk.de/BeCurious.htm>
- 2009-10-12: Completely rearranged and still under construction.
Old file: <http://www.snrk.de/HolidaySnarkOld.pdf>
- 2009-06-30: P. 20: Charles Darwin's old study in Down
- 2009-06-27: A Warning (page 27)
- 2009-06-21: More on the Beaver
- 2009-06-16: John Milton's Paradise Lost, Gustave Doré's illustration
- 2009-06-14: Remark on Charles Darwin and on snarking readers.
- 2009-05-31: Pages 3 and 4 rewritten. Picture of HMS Beagle added.
- 2009-04-28: 8.5 MB, Ditchley Portrait (Queen Elizabeth I drawn by Marcus Gheeraerts the younger, ca. 1592) and Holiday's book cover
- 2009-04-21: 7.4 MB
picscollection.pdf renamed to HolidaySnark.pdf
(access via HolidaySnark.cgi for counting)
- 2009-01: 1st versions

Goetz Kluge, 2009-12-31